

Increasing Student Achievement...

It's All About Strategy!

My Learning Style Plan

"For me, math success is all about taking good notes. I write down the steps for solving each type of problem. Then I make flashcards for each type of problem-solving approach. I write the type of problem on one side of the flashcard and the step-by-step approach to solving the problem on the other side. I then practice reading the type of problem and writing down the step-by-step approach to solving the problem. Then, I read the step-by-step problem-solving side of each card and match the approach to the type of problem."

Personality, Temperament, Mindset and Grit

"I scored a 2 on the Grit test which is right next to 1. That means that I am not really that gritty, I think that this is pretty accurate because normally every time I try something new I always quit when it gets hard. I know that this isn't the best score so I know now that I should persevere instead of just quitting when something gets hard. Grit is both passion and perseverance and it is important to have grit."

My Time Management & Study Skills Plan

"I am a visual learner and my preferred learning style is in a classroom where there are no distractions, such as my phone. However, this semester has been different from previous semesters because all of my dual enrollment classes are on-line. I am not getting any interaction with my professors or other students besides discussion boards and e-mails. The learning is left up to me by completing the textbook readings, homework, quizzes, tests, and any other assignments."

My Goals

"My Academic Goals: I plan to be inducted into multiple honor societies such as International Thespian Society, English Honor Society, Mu Alpha Theta, National Honor Society, French Honor Society, and Tri-M Music Honor Society. I also plan to make the Principal's List, earn awards from tournaments/meets, and become valedictorian of my graduating class."

Research-based Research-responsive

The research-based strategies presented through each of the books in the Who I Am series have already proven to increase student learning and student engagement.

Each book in the series contains examples of actual responses from middle school and high school students engaged in self-reflection, critical thinking, and narrative writing.

While each book in the series provides guidance in becoming a better student NOW, they are also written to help any student to become a more capable student within the context of pursuing their future college, career, or workplace aspirations.

"I want students to develop the mindset and grit to dream big, and reach high. After that, all they need are the 'right' strategies."
